Looking for work experience in an international team of a global company? Join us!

AkzoNobel is looking for an intern to support its Commercial Business Communications team in its Headquarters in Amsterdam.

Who we are

At AkzoNobel, we are passionate about making and selling the best paints and coatings globally.

Did you know that when you pick up a drinks can anywhere in the world, there is 50 percent chance that AkzoNobel's coatings are on it? Or that the McLaren Formula One sports our coatings? Or that AkzoNobel coatings have been to space?

These are just some of the cool stories that the AkzoNobel Commercial Business Communications team is helping the business to tell - to both employees and the world.

We are looking for an intern to help us find and tell these exciting stories.

Who we are looking for

We are looking for an enthusiastic intern with near to native English language skills who is confident in finding, writing and editing compelling stories in English about such diverse topics as our latest business successes, our latest innovations and our drive to find more sustainable solutions for our customers. The role will be mainly internally focused, but external communications exposure is not excluded. We are looking for a proactive self-starter who is not afraid to take on responsibility and is eager to learn on the go. The tasks will be diverse – from managing our content management systems to publish stories on our intranet and other channels to filming and editing internal videos and writing engaging stories – but of course new and fresh ideas are always welcome. And don't worry – we all get our own coffees.
