

Vacancy: Sounding Board for the Sustainability Committee FSW

FSW goes green!

Do you want to contribute to making the faculty sustainable? Then this is your chance! The faculty, as an educator of social and behavioural sciences, feels it is its responsibility to not just execute the sustainability measures that are established by the university, but also to go a step further and look at behavioural change, awareness and acceptance (sustainability and a healthier life). Therefore, the Faculty of Social and Behavioural Sciences will appoint a Sustainability Committee and a Sounding Board for the committee. The Sounding Board, consisting of faculty employees and students, will assist the sustainability committee in developing, drafting and implementing sustainability proposals.

Would you like to think about the green developments in the faculty? Sign up for the sustainability sounding board! The most important information:

Who are you?

We are looking for students who are enthusiastic about sustainability and who follow an education programme at the faculty of Social and Behavioural Sciences. The students preferably have a large network within the faculty. Students who will partake in the sounding board have to be able to at least understand Dutch, as Dutch will be the main language of both the meetings and the proposals.

What is expected?

The members of the sounding board have two tasks: it is expected that they can motivate their constituency for the activities that will be set out by the sustainability committee. There is also an important task in thinking along about the direction of the proposals that the committee makes.

How much time will it take?

Participation in the sounding board will cost you about 4 hours per month. You will fill that time with reading and reflecting on proposals, and then discussing those proposals. Both the committee and the sounding board will start in September 2018.

How do you sign up?

You can sign up for the sounding board by sending a short motivation (1A4 max.) to assessor@fsw.leidenuniv.nl, August 6 2018, 12:00 at the latest.

You can address your motivation to Laura van der Plas, the assessor of the faculty. In your motivation, be sure to include:

- what programme and what study year you are in in the academic year 2018-2019;
- why you possess a large network within the faculty;
- why you want to partake in the sounding board;
- your most creative idea to make the faculty greener.

The assessor will select four students from all applicants to partake in the sounding board.
